

LIBRARY NOTICES¹

The Library will make every attempt to have delivered email pre- and day due notices before an item is overdue, but the delivery of an email notice cannot be guaranteed due to the nature of email-based technology.

Subsequent email and/or printed notices, after a set period of time, will be sent advising the patron of items still out and overdue.

The Library will make every attempt to deliver email due-date notices before an item is overdue, but the delivery of an email notice cannot be guaranteed due to the nature of email-based technology.

If Library materials are still overdue after a final set period of time, the final notice will come from a collection agency, as the items will be considered unrecoverable from the patron. Charges included on the notice will include all unpaid fines and fees owed to the Library, plus any fees charged by the collection agency.

¹ Information about current fees related to Library Notices may be found at the Circulation Desks at the Library and on the Library's website.